Pierce Transit Rider Survey January 2023

Methodology

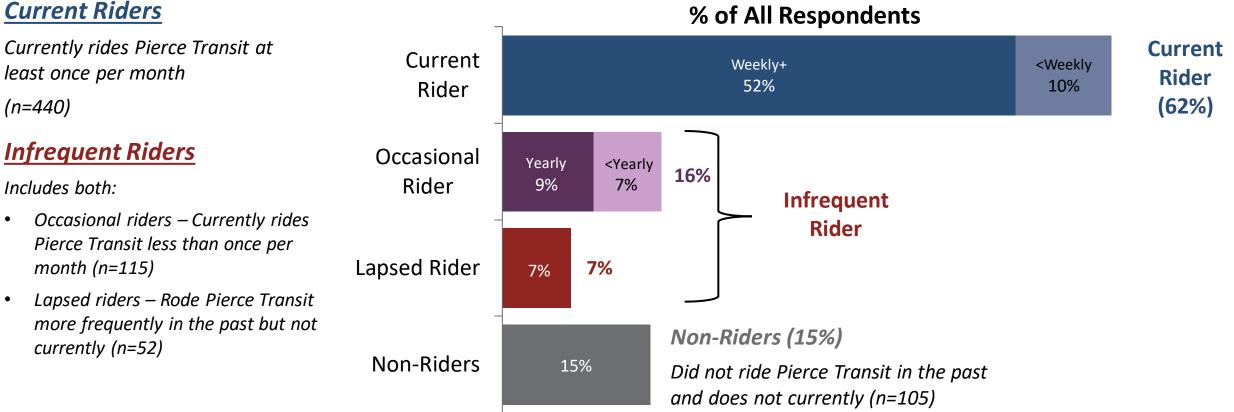

- Public online survey of Pierce Transit riders
- Survey invitations and links distributed by a variety of outreach methods, including:
 - Customer email lists and text message subscribers
 - Pierce Transit's website, Facebook, Twitter, and Instagram accounts
 - Physical outreach via signage on-board buses and at stops/shelters
 - On-board audio announcements
- Survey conducted September 12th October 26th, 2022
- 712 interviews (n) total; including 440 current riders and 167 infrequent(occasional/lapsed riders)
- Comparison caveats: Throughout this report, select comparisons are made with previous years' surveys which involved onboard, in-person survey distribution prior to the COVID-19 pandemic. Due to various direct and indirect challenges with replicating this approach following the impacts of the pandemic, the difference in survey approach in 2022 may have some effect on those comparisons, in addition to rider behavior changes over the last couple years. Differences in survey language, response categories, and availability of previous years' data are also noted throughout.

Please note that due to rounding, some percent $ages^{0}$ may not add up to exactly 100%.

Pierce Transit Ridership Categories

Over half (62%) of survey participants are current riders, consisting of those who ride Pierce Transit at least once a month. About a quarter (23%) either ride occasionally (a few times a year or less or used to ride but have stopped). Another 15% are non-riders who never ride Pierce Transit buses. Most of the results in this report will focus on current and occasional riders.

Demographics

Findings Summary

- To help delineate the results between respondents who are more actively engaged with Pierce Transit bus service and those who are less engaged, this reporting focuses on each as two distinct groups of current riders (those riding at least once a month) and infrequent riders (those riding less than once a month and lapsed riders who've stopped riding).
- Current riders tend to diversify their travel modes, and they report using a variety of different modes to supplement their Pierce Transit usage, including walking and biking, other public transit modes (especially Sound Transit Express Bus and Sounder), ridehailing services, and working remotely.
- Infrequent Pierce Transit riders are far more car dependent than current riders, and work remotely more often. Otherwise, they tend to walk and bike less frequently and rarely use other public transit services.
- When accessing the bus, majorities of both current and infrequent riders walk to the nearest stop/station, though infrequent riders are also more likely to drive alone to get to the service. 37 of 40

Findings Summary

- Current riders rely on Pierce Transit for a relatively broad range of trips, led by work/commute trips, shopping/errands, medical services, fun/recreation, and dining out.
- Whenever they use Pierce Transit, infrequent riders primarily use it for work and businessrelated trip, but they also use the service relatively often for special events, recreation and social events, and shopping or errands.
- Majorities of both current and infrequent riders use ORCA cards particularly via e-purse – to pay their fares. Additionally, a greater share of infrequent riders report using cash.
- In terms of their satisfaction with Pierce Transit, most current riders give the service positive marks, overall. These sentiments are generally comparable to the levels shown in 2014 survey, but lower than the ratings spike in 2017.
- Current riders generally give Pierce Transit positive marks for most of the attributes tested, and rate it highest on the value for fare paid, on-board cleanliness, safety during the daytime, and the availability of schedule/trip planning information.

Findings Summary

- Infrequent riders are comparatively more critical of Pierce Transit's service, both overall and across specific attributes. Many are more neutral in their ratings, or unsure.
- The frequency of buses is a significant pain point for both current and infrequent riders; nearly half of both customer groups express dissatisfaction with that aspect of the service. Both groups also cite increased frequency as a key top-of-mind improvement suggestion for Pierce Transit.
- Regular riders also give relatively lower ratings for personal safety after dark, transfer wait times, and communication about unplanned service disruptions.
- Comparatively, infrequent riders also express significant dissatisfaction with the total time it takes to get places using Pierce Transit, personal safety on streets and sidewalks, and personal safety on-board and at stops/stations after dark.
- Strong majorities of both current and infrequent riders are at least somewhat interested in riding Pierce Transit more often and they share generally positive views of Pierce Transit as an agency and brand.
